“This is a living declaration and a binding private contract. It is enforceable under UCC, Common Law, and Divine Law.”

Notice

- Notice to Principal is Notice to Agent
- Notice to Agent is Notice to Principal

This document constitutes a lawful affidavit and commercial contract. It is not subject to statutory interpretation, corporate overlay, or administrative presumption. It shall be governed solely by:

- Divine Law
- Natural Law
- Common Law
- Uniform Commercial Code (UCC)
- The Constitution for the United States of America (1789)

Purpose of This Record

This packet serves as:

- A Declaration of Status — rebutting all presumptions of corporate citizenship or wardship.
- A Commercial Contract — establishing terms, conditions, and liabilities for any party engaging with the living man.
- A Security Instrument — forming the basis for lawful liens, claims, and enforcement under UCC-1 and related filings.

“He who does not assert his rights has none.”

— Ryle; Travis-Steven

Language as Weapon: Addressing Fraudulent Conveyance

“Where words lose their meaning, people lose their freedom.” — Confucius

This document continues with the necessary correction of deceptive language that has long undermined the rights, property, and lawful standing of individuals. Language, once a tool of precision and clarity, has been manipulated into a weapon of entrapment through the practice of fraudulent conveyance. By subtly redefining foundational terms, statutory and administrative entities have ensnared individuals in adhesion contracts and unlawful presumptions, often without their awareness or explicit consent.

The fraudulent conveyance of language operates through what is termed “terms of art” — words that carry a unique and specific legal meaning, distinct from their common understanding. This silent transformation of language forms a sophisticated mechanism of control, depriving individuals of their natural rights and embedding them into a framework of corporate and statutory presumption.

Notable Examples of Misused Terms

- Infant: Once referring solely to a newborn child, the term now includes any human who has not reached the age of majority. This redefinition enables the treatment of competent adults as legal wards or incompetents under presumed jurisdiction.
- Estate: Historically denoting inherited property, “estate” is now redefined as a fictional legal construct that emerges when a man or woman reaches the age of majority. This construct is often used to separate the living individual from their natural rights, binding them into a corporate role.
- State: Traditionally representing a sovereign republic, “state” is now frequently used to describe federal administrative regions tied to ZIP code overlays. This subtle shift binds individuals into jurisdictional submission to the District of Columbia, often without their informed consent.

These manipulations are neither random nor benign. They represent a calculated effort to establish a foundation of presumption and silent contracts—contracts forged without full disclosure and in the absence of lawful consent. The restoration of clarity and truth in language is not merely an academic pursuit but a necessary step in reclaiming individual sovereignty and natural rights.

“He who controls the language controls the narrative. He who reclaims the language reclaims the truth.”
